INTRODUCING PERFORMANCE WORKSHOPS

WINTER 2014 - SPRING 2015

(1) FLEXIBILITY WORKSHOP FOR ATHLETES, SPORTS PEOPLE, COACHES

*Suzy Hamilton US
1500m Champion*

This one day workshop presented by Gerard Hartmann and David Campbell outlines the theory and methodologies of stretching both to recuperate flexibility to enhance athletic performance and to limit potential injury. There is a strong practical component to the day. Participants will be taught specific stretching exercises best employed for two distinct purposes:

- (A) Flexibility warm up, cool down programme. This expands on the correct stretching exercises to do in preparation prior to sports specific training-competition for optimising performance and the optimal stretching regime employed after training focuses on regaining pre-exercise tissue length and decrease cramping and limit injury associated with increased tightness and fatigue.
- (B) Flexibility training programme. This is defined as a planned, deliberate, and regular programme of stretching exercises that can permanently and progressively increase the usable range of motion of a joint or set of joints over a period.

One of the main characteristics associated with athletes as they age is loss of flexibility. Regular stretching is the single most important thing athletes can do to maintain optimal joint range of motion, prevent stiffness and limit injury.

Cycling poses mechanical and postural stresses on the musculoskeletal system specific to spending hours on the bike fixed to three contact points, - feet on pedals, hands on handlebars, bum on saddle in a relatively fixed flexed posture.

Certain muscles, the phasic agonist muscles utilised in cycling tend to become over strong and over tight while their opposing antagonist muscle groups become weak and hypotonic leading to structural imbalance with resultant postural changes resulting in injury accruing.

Participants will learn preventative measures to prevent musculoskeletal imbalances and limit the potential for overuse injury.
